The Wild Woods...

In literacy, we have been focusing on descriptive writing this week. We created a descriptive setting in connection to our class book!

Spring trees looking over petalised seas. The blue spots bunny leaping swiftly through the forest to the wood in his hands - for the winter. Old oak trees branches making the wistful wind whistle they out anything in his old black hood.

Rushing rivers going down twisty torty mossy rivers. Spelchy mud on the old wooden walk way. Soft wind rushing past my golden, soft cold hands. Dreamy blue bells. Sit in moist green swooshing grass. Vibrant orange fox creeping through the forest.

I can create a descriptive setting from our class text.

Old, crooked trees stand tall in the wild wood. The rough wind rose through the tall trees. I will taste the dark wise owl flew like an angel with its graceful wings. Squelchy mud covers the bright green grass.

pois-ornish berries sit patiently on dot spirally branches. Drip! Trickling water drips steadily down the rough bark of weepy trees. Sticky spiderwebs hang from creaky branches. Creepy shadows dance acrobatically on the damp forest floor.

The soft glow of fairy lights around the cherry garden. Silken trees overlook the damp, misty ground. Overgrown trees block all moonlight from the huge forest. A dwarf bunnies scurried into its overgrown den. Squelchy muddy ground is all wet and overgrown. Cracking, leathery and gorging. Luminous moonlight shines down on the dark damp forest.

Leaves crunch under tiny unknown footsteps. Snake glides up the tips of the trees. Soft moss covers the damp ground. Blowing through over the prickly ferns. Spines like dew drops on the delicate spider web. Fantasy traps are scattered around the overgrown ground.

Squirry, soft mud lays under the crooked ancient trees. Old owls perched on the straggling tree. Dark shadows shadowed ringed the gloomy dark forest. Wild wind sways the crunchy leaf's back and forth. The remnant moon shows as it as pale light up the moon light up the moon light sky.

Gloomy, slimy sap hardens over time on the ancient tree. Smokey sassy campfire surrounds the wild wood. Animals tracks go hidden behind historical trees. Wet mud splashed under the glossy and silky little animals. Sizzle, went the hot wild, mushy mushrooms on the crackling flaming fire.

Leafless leaves, blew through the overgrown trees in the gusty wind. While a astonishing fox was crunching through the damp forest. An owl was tweeting while perched on a thin branch. Dead leaves flew across the dark overgrown treetops.
